PRESS COMMENTS ON THE MESSAGE.

What the New York Papers This Morning Say.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6 .- The Herald editorially says the last anoual message of President Grant is the emptiest document of the kind ever sent to Congress, ment of the kind ever sent to congress, but it has the merit of being short. The President is a man of sense. He scorns to make a parade of recommendations which have no chance of adoption, or to spin out words to no purpose. We commend the brevity, and have no particular faut to find with the vanity of his final message. The Herald says it is a mark of sagacity and good sense for the President to leave future measures the President to leave future measures to those who will be responsible for their to those who will be responsible for their success. He also shows wisdom in not discussing matters connected with the Presidential contest. A parade of his views on this exciting subject would have been idle, and the President evinces the solid qualities of his mind in terrorize elegants.

It is only just to say of him that his military services entitled him to the country's gratitude, and that if his civic career was a failure, it was only his misfortune, while it was the people's fault. Let us take our share of the blame of it, and remember with satisfaction that at least in one instance—his veto of the in-flation bill—his administration was allke benerable to himself and serviceable to

It says: "We have been told that a special message will be sent to Congress at another time, but this is the time when plain words from the President are required, not less in the interest of humanity, but in the interest of the country, whose sense of justice is outraged by a conspiracy as audactious as that which compelled the weak and vacillating Buchanan to remain passive while the rebelilion was organized. He owed an emphatic declaration of his own opinions to his own reputation, which may easily be misjudged by the Republican party, which is in no mood to brook timidity or hesitation in its leaders and to the people with the stage sank helpless to the floor, and were dragged out in an insensible condition.

Mrs. Farren alludes to the panic as something horrible to witness and impossible to describe. It is believed none of the employes lost their lives. If every bit of the scenery had been dranched in kerosene the fire could not have spread more rapidly nor furiously. Even before any fire engine had responded the auditorium was a sea of fire.

LATER-TERRIBLE LOSS OF LIFE. BROOKLYN, Dec. 6 .- The loss of life by the burning of the Brooklyn Theater has proved to be terrible. Thirty-three dead bodies have been taken from the ruins and placed in the Morgue, and fi teen more are supposed to be in the heater. Most of those who perished were in the dress circle, where escape was cut off by the burning of the stairs. They were all suffocated.

LATER AND STILL WORSE-ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY LIVES LOST.

BROOKLYN, Dec. 6 .- It is now estimated that one bundred and fifty lives were lost by the fire at the Brooklyn Theater last night. Sixty-five bodies have been removed from the ruins.

Ali that remains of the Brooklyn Theater is a smouldering heap of ruins. Firemen and police are actively at work in search of the charred remains of the poor people who lost their lives in the vain effort to escape from the smoke and flames which surrounded them.

The scene during the fire was a terri ble one. It was a desperate rush and struggie for life, and bodies of girls, women and children, and many of the men unable to reach the doors now being removed from the ruins, while friends and relatives of missing persons are crowded in the Station-house, tearfully examining hats shawls and other portions of clothing which were picked up by the police when the fire had been sufficiently subdueds to permit men to work among the

Why Business Men Complain, The effect of the excitement and un-certainty in regard to the result of the recent elections is seriously affecting business in every part of the country, and nowhere is it telt more seriously than in the wholesale trade of this city. which depends largely for support upon the Southern States.

About the 1st of November most of the wholesale houses sent out their travel ing salesmen, and from them comes the almost unanimous report that they are unable to make a sufficient number of sales to pay their traveling exponses.

The representative of one large concern on Hanover street writes from

North Carolina that he has traveled nearly four hundred miles among the regular customers of the house without selling a single bill, and another gentle-man on the roadin North Carolina, representing a very large notion house on the same street, telegraphs to his em-players that he has not even shown his samples in ten days.

Selling by the Pound.

We have often wondered why, in large cities, where so many thousands of the poorer classes of laborers congregate, the law does not make some provision for their necessity in the matter of bread. The bukers make their loaves large or small, as circumstances dictate; and the great public, though it may "flare up" now and them when in a murmuring humor, generally accepts what is given it with sufficient stances dictate; and the great public though it may "fare up" now and them when in a murmuring humor, generally accepts what is given it with sufficient good temper. In France, the price of bread is considered so important a master of state, considering that it touches every man's stomach (unrough the nerve which is said to communicate with his pocket!), that the Government arranges it every week, and compensates the hakers for any loss they may suffer in consequence. That kind of legislation is somewhat arbitrary, and would not suit in this country; but we do think it would be both proper and just to have bread sold altogether by the pound, when every man could be aware of the price he actually paid, and could suit himself as to the quality of the article he received for his money.

A "loal" of bread has no deficite size beyond that given it by the caprice of its manufacturer; and although an upright baker will deal fairly with his customers, there are in that trade, as in all others, unjust men, who abuse the confidence placed in them, and turn the integrity of others to their own private advantage. In the country, where people make their own family bread, the matter in question is one of little moment; but in large chies, where such a habit but partially prevails, it assumed a grave character; and selling bread by the pound, instead of by an arbitrary ever-changing, individual standard seems to be a thing imperatively demanded by a decent sense of public justice.
